THE PURE PLOT PITCH: Here's bad day: Guy sets out to rob a bank but ends up pulling a carjacking, and when he's arrested a body is found in the trunk. Fever Dreams Oct 26 2019 Raphael LaFontaine's parents were "root workers," hoodoo practitioners who sold potions, infusions, vapors and spells in Beauregard Parish, Louisiana. Both before and while she was pregnant with Raphael, Malina LaFontaine ingested the herbs and roots that were her and her husband's stock and trade. Perhaps as a result of this, from early childhood Raphael was afflicted with strange visions and fever dreams. He grew up considering himself a freak masquerading as a normal person, but his spells sometimes allowed him to see deeply into other people's emotions and personalities. Both a curse and a gift, these talents have served Rafe well, first as a Baltimore police officer and then as private detective. The story begins with a frayed-at-the-edges lawyer who asks Rafe to help his client with a simple matter, a hard to get rid of ex-boyfriend who also happens to be a Baltimore cop. When Rafe sets out to meet his new client he is attacked and when he wakes up he finds that nothing is what it had seemed, and that he is suspected of murdering a complete stranger. Rafe soon becomes even more deeply entangled in a confusing web of lies and murder.

Small House, Big Yard Nov 19 2021 This is a book about North American places, large and small, urban and rural, well known and off the beaten track. It's also a book about all the wonderful strangers we knew for an hour or two. And to some degree, a book about living the life of a tumbleweed. When I retired we bought a really big recreational vehicle (RV), sold the house, got rid of our "stuff," and set out on a ten year roadtrip to see what there was to see.

Who We Really Are Aug 05 2020 "Who We Really Are" originated on facts, not stories; it is about the strangeness of life and all we encounter in our passage through it. Who we are; when looking deep, is a difficult question to answer! Do we actually know that person we see in the mirror? While observing ourselves closely, do we like what we see? Are we familiar with our reflection? Do we recognize our needs? Are they reasonable? What do we seek? Is it worthy? Alternatively, maybe it is just suitable! Would we recognize joy if lacking the feeling of sadness? Could we really cherish the warmth from a loved one if we never walked the path of loneliness? Is it possible to cherish relaxation when avoiding pressure? How can someone value free will while ungratefully wasting his gift of life? Some of these questions we try to ignore, because at any given time, we do not have the answers, and if we do, we do not like them, so we continue with our life, living it in denial. In actuality, instead of observing ourselves, we are concerned about our image, and most of the time we are comparing our self with others. We recognize true value only when we have lost it. While suffering from our losses, we neglect all that still surrounds us. That is when ignorance takes over, and unconsciously we lose our righteousness. At that point, we engage in a quest to escape from reality. When we are successful, we slow and painfully lose our faith. But then again, in all our deeds, it is our nature to search for the easiest way through life; struggle is not an option. Consequently, upon encountering difficulties, we experience disappointment and stress. We fail to recognize that difficulties are necessary to achieve comfort. Feelings, bad or good, are our best gifts ever, so treasure them, and smile more often, because regrettable mistakes we formulate with a serious look on our face.

Then, one fateful night, while attending a highly unorthodox therapy session mandated by his boss, Gerald Blumenstein died. Now his life will never be the same ...Life Sucks, Death Bites is a dark comedy about the inconveniences of daily life and nightly undeath, with some romance and a bit of psychotherapy thrown in for good measure.
