Games Nov 09 2020 "Games are a unique art form. The game designer doesn't just create a world; they create who you will be in that world. They tell you what abilities to use and what goals to take on. In other words, they specify a form of agency. Games work in the medium of agency. And to play them, we take on alternate agencies and submerge ourselves in them. What can we learn about our own rationality and agency, from thinking about games? We learn that we have a considerable degree of fluidity with our agency. First, we have the capacity for a peculiar sort of motivational inversion. For some of us, winning is not the point. We take on an interest in winning temporarily, so that we can play the game. Thus, we are capable of taking on temporary and disposable ends. We can submerge ourselves in alternate agencies, letting them dominate our consciousness, and then dropping them the moment the game is over. Games are, then, a way of recording forms of agency, of encoding them in artifacts. Our games are a library of agencies. And exploring that library can help us develop our own agency and autonomy. But this technology can also be used for art. Games can sculpt our practical activity, for the sake of the beauty of our own actions. Games are part of a crucial, but overlooked category of art - the process arts. These are the arts which evoke an activity, and then ask you to appreciate your own activity. And games are a special place where we can foster beautiful experiences of our own activity. Because our struggles, in games, can be designed to fit our capacities. Games can present a harmonious world, where our abilities fit the task, and where we pursue obvious goals and act under clear values. Games are a kind of existential balm against the difficult and exhausting value clarity of the world. But this presents a special danger. Games can be a fantasy of value clarity. And when that fantasy leaks out into the world, we can be tempted to oversimplify our enduring values. Then, the pleasures of games can seduce us away from our autonomy, and reduce our agency."--

Lucky Poetry and Journal Entries Dec 11 2020 Quite a few of the poems are about my son's journey as a classical guitarist. Others are about me as a sad sack working my way to a better life. It is my favorite way of writing.

Seemingly Mundane Mar 02 2020 Develop a habit of daily journaling and cultivate an appreciation for your life. Daily journaling can be easy and inspiring, even if you only give it five minutes a day. Opening a journal to a blank page can sometimes feel intimidating. This journal is very low-pressure, and doesn't come with a large time commitment, just six lines per day. It is not a guided journal and there aren't daily prompts. Instead, it's a short entry journal with an intention as a whole, and that's to help you cultivate gratitude, appreciation, presence, self-love and acceptance... for your life, as it is NOW. In this journal, all you have to do is write a little bit about what happens each day, like you would in a diary. From the outside, that seems super basic, but there is magic underneath this daily practice. Social media has made us look at our lives in such a way that only the things we would actually consider posting are worthy. If it's not good enough to post online, then it's not good enough. And we end up missing so much of the good stuff because we have a wonky measuring stick to determine what's "good enough." Rather than being in a perpetual state of wishing for a new and improved life, this journal helps you stay in the present moment by paying attention to what you're living now; since you'll want to write about it later. And what you end up with is a keepsake of a whole year of your life. Of little things that you might not have noted down otherwise. Little things that maybe ended up being big things. Inside you will find: One year worth of entries Semi-dated, start any day, any year Short-entry journal, six lines per day Five days per page Two pages every month(ish) to vision-board, scrapbook, or as extra journaling space. Increase your happiness baseline, and build a sense of gratitude for your days as they currently are, knowing that where you are now is good enough, and from that foundation, you can call in more. The "everyday" only seems mundane and common, but it's actually what our whole lives are made of. Thanks so much for supporting a woman-owned small business. You're awesome!

Financial Accounting Oct 09 2020 Now in its sixth edition, Ingram, Albright, FINANCIAL ACCOUNTING WITH JOURNAL ENTRIES, INTERNATIONAL EDITION continues to teach students to understand the impact of accounting information on a company's financial statements. The authors illustrate accounting not as a set of technical procedures, but as a way of identifying and understanding business problems and a means for evaluating alternative solutions. By organizing the text around the flow of information through a business, the authors provide students with a sound understanding of the accounting information system and then an analysis of the financial, investing and operating activities of the firm. This approach is especially ideal for students who will become business managers, not accountants.
