The Plaid Memorandum Jan 24 2020 Long-time residents of T-Ville, Mrs. Plaid and Old Mr. P, are dismayed to see that their obituaries are published prematurely (and with little regard for facts) in the local newspaper. They decide to "lay low," though, in case someone is trying to do them in. Before heading out of town, Mrs. Plaid handwrites a memo to her office staff, which accidentally gets transmitted all over the world. Due to her atrocious handwriting, everyone interprets the memo differently, causing problems. Meanwhile, a devious person (or group) makes replicas of the famous Large Hadron Collider and conducts their own "Big Bang" experiments in the U.S., but without safety precautions, causing random black holes to appear and disappear, along with the hapless people who get sucked into them. One such hapless person is the only person, other than Mrs. Plaid, who can read Mrs. Plaid's handwriting and might be able to clear some things up. Old Mr. P and Mrs. Plaid are tried together for each other's murder in a combined trial that has everyone confused. A hilarious short story from the author of Out of Order Murder Mystery.

How Peace Was Lost: The 1935 Memorandum: Developments Affecting American Policy in the Far East Oct 21 2019 Commissioned by the State Department, senior diplomat MacMurray's 1935 memorandum challenged the view that Japan was an unprovoked aggressor and that the US should support Nationalist China. Editor Arthur Waldron adds an introduction and notes, as well as a comprehensive chronology and a bibliography of both Western- and Asian-language materials.
